Tree planting is recognized as one of the most engaging, environmentally-friendly activities that people can participate in to help the planet when done properly. Trees provide numerous long-term and short-term benefits. They not only look nice, but they also remove and store carbon from the atmosphere, slow heavy rain and thus reduce the risk of flooding, improve air quality, and reduce the urban heat island effect by reflecting sunlight and providing shade. We are taking steps to encourage ordinary people to participate in “tree plantation” programme and to raise awareness about the importance of tree plantation in combating climate change. Trees provide clean air for living beings to breathe and generate energy. The importance of plantations for a healthy life free of suffocation and pollution cannot be overstated, particularly in urban areas.

OBJECTIVES:

- 1) To understand the importance of tree plantation.
- 2) To understand the benefit of clean air by plantation.

The Go Green Initiative improves lifelong outcomes for children by advancing environmental health, safety, and sustainability at school, colleges and home. Sometimes it's disheartening to look at the state of our planet. And it's hard to know if our individual changes are making a difference. But the truth is that every positive action has a positive impact. Going green means different things to different people. While some can completely embrace the zero-waste movement, it might feel unattainable or stressful to others. The Swachh Abhiyan in college is the most significant cleanliness campaign as of today.
